Sandra,

You may think sexual harassment is something only men can do to women, but you crossed the line twice today. You don't know me nearly well enough to make aspersions about my sexuality. You may find it funny, but I find it tasteless, rude and utterly disrespectful, particularly for you to make your remarks in the company of others. Be thankful I have the tact to hold my tongue; you would not have liked to be on the receiving end of what your comments inspired me to say. If you continue to speak of me in such a base and disgusting manner, I'll continue not to retort, but this will become a matter for Human Resources.

Thanks chicas

PS

JLo looked extraordinarily beautiful last night at the launch of her Spanish album, That bitch is fierce. And aging so damn well. I figure it cant all be make up (since by my assumpton, all the rich divas have access to the best) she is glowing from the inside. Marc becomes her!

I think this would make a great addition to any Black History Month stories you may have on tap. These two black female friends who met in law school have created and developed this great new product. Let me know if you'd like images, samples, or to set up an interview. Thanks!
